FRIDAY, JANUARY 31, 1879. The stormy weather which has prevailed not only in Honolulu and vicinity but throughout the entire group for the past iwenty days, has very materially interrupted inter-island communication, preventing not only the bringing forward of produce for transhipment abroad, but also by the clogging up of roads with mud, obstructing very much the manufacture of our principal staple,woaking rains, get such a hold upon the ground as will ensure a large crop next year. British bark Thalia, off Valparaiso, but we learn that the loss of her cargo and machinery, together with that of the Eskbank, is being supplemented by three vessels, now being dispatched from Glasgow, one vessel, the Lallah Rookh, having already sailed with 1,500 tons of merchandise and machinery. It is contemplated to send a large steamer from Glasgow in April with a full cargo of merchandise and machinery to Honolulu. We also learn if a steamer is sent out she will call at the Madeira Islands and bring a number of Immigrants.

By the list of vessels appended below, it will be seen that there are no less than thirty on the way to Honolulu from foreign ports.

THE CONTEMPT CASE

As stated in our issue of last week, the editor of the Hawaiian Gazette was on Monday brought before the Judges of the Supreme Court on a charge of contempt. The proceedings have attacted considerable attention, and we give an account in full. We believe however that public opinion will settle down to the conclusion that the whole affair is tame. The editor was undoubtedly in contempt. He declares that he did not mean to be so, and the Court lets him off with a reprimand. The only appreciable result as it would seem is that an insignificant suddenly been lifted into notoriety and now assumes the role of a martyr. The " liberty of the press" is a very important principle, and one that is extremely dear to every man claiming English or American origin. But the abuse of liberty becomes license, and the very worst of tyranny is the result, dangerous to the rights of life and liberty themselves.

Let us not be understood as disclaiming the right of the press to fairly criticise the acts of the Judiciary, as well as those of the Executive and Legislative Departments of government. We shall insist upon that right, and freely exercise it on all proper occasions; remembering, however, that while the Constitution of the country asserts that " all men may freely speak, write and publish their sentiments on all of that right.

On the coming in of the Court on Monday, 27th ult., Mr. MacDowell was called upon, in accordance with the rule served upon him, to show cause why he should not be adjudged guilty of contempt for having published on January 22nd an editorial article in the newspaper called The Hawaiian Gazette, of which he is editor and publisher, a copy of which, was attached to the rule served upon him.

Mr. MacDowell said that it was a matter of importance to himself, and, as he thought, to the him only on Friday evening, and he had not had time to prepare himself to answer, and asked for disposed to give him time, and that on coming approaches the crater cliffs two or three miles south in again, he would be expected to answer the of the hotel. Well, from this point on to the hotel somewhat sudden change which came over their honors, the Chancellor of the Kingdom and his Associates, on the construction put upon the laws for the punishment of smuggling opium, has taken everybody by surprise, and has occasibned no small amount of comment."

And again, you say, " But how strange it is that the magistrates, and even the learned Judges of the Supreme Court, should have overlooked this matter for so long ! '

You will be desired to show, on what occasion, if any, a person has been presented before the Chancellor, or when the question on the construction of these Statutes has been brought before this Court, since the passage of the Act of 1874; and, if no case has been presented or the question on the construction of the Statute has not been raised, how is it that you inform the public that a change has come over the Chancel-Court have overlooked the matter?

Again; you state that " In other words, there is no such thing as satisfying the law for the tion to the scene. During the night I spent there & above offence, except by imprisonment at hard new stream of lava burst from Halemaumau and

By reading the last line of the first section of the act, you will find, that a person convicted of this offense must be sentenced to imprisonment with or without hard labor at the discretion of the Court. You will be desired, therefore, to point out what sentence you may find in the opinion delivered by the Court which justifies you in telling the public, that " there is no such thing as satisfying the law, except by imprisonment at hard labor."

Again, you say that this " strange discovery" reminds you of a case of a Pennsylvania Judge. Discovery is the act of disclosing to view or bringing to light or finding out something hidden. Now, is it strange, that this Court should disclose to view any statute, much less, one only made four years ago; and in telling your story about the Pennsylvania Judge, you say that he was very barsh in his charge to the Jury, and bore down with unusual severity on the defendants, and finally sentenced them under a statute which had been repealed two years before; that a writ of error was taken out to the Supreme Court, and that the Chief Justice of that Court bandled Judge Parsons with merited severity and the press took the matter up so earnestly, that the Judge was compelled to resign. You allude to one writer on the subject as having changed the said Judge with vindictiveness and turning to the mistakes he made whilst Judge, deplored the uncertainty of the law in such hands and characterized it thus :

> He wires in and wires out Leaving the people still in doubt.
> Whether the snake that made the track is going South or coming back.

It is hoped that at your hearing, you will answer the following points : Has it borne with any severity or even commented | if it had been covered with a sheet spread over its on the defendant in this case at all? Has the entire summit, stretching forty or fifty miles in Statute under which the inferior Courts have | length, without an uncovered ridge or hill to be been directed to proceed, been repealed?

If your illustration has any meaning at all, has it any other meaning than to charge this Court with "vindictiveness" in the judgment alluded to, and to inform the people by a ridicu-lous quotation that the decisions of this Court are senselessly uncertain? And if it has no such meaning what meaning has it in connection with the comment upon the Court's decisions? On Wednesday 29th, Mr. MacDowell addressed the Court in a feeling and proper manner, dis-avowing any intention of disrespect, averring that it was a right of the press to comment respectfully on the decision of the Courts, claimed for himself, that he yielded to no person in the respect which he entertained and always purposed to manifest for judicial authority-submitted, that if the anecdote about the Pennsylvania Judge, which he claimed to be irrelevant and merely playful, should be subtracted, his article could not be construed by any one to contain any disrespectful matter—and closed by submitting himself to the judgment of the Court.

After a recess, the Court made the following

MR. MacDowell-You have said that, in the article published which is the subject of this proceeding, you have intended no disrespect to the Court, and that, if your article be construed properly, leaving out the anecdots regarding the Pennsylvania Judge, which you characterize as playful and irrelevant, no one can say, that it You go on farther and say, that you regret, that any one should have understood it as disrespectful and that you yield to no one in showing respect for judicial authority and that you have intended and do intend no disrespec and that you have intended and do intend no distribute for the Court or any member of the Court; and that you desire and intend to jurge yourself of any contempt whatsoever. In this you have done well. It is true, that, if you subtract the anecdote, that there is no contempt in your article. But your words, that "an unexpected and sudden change has come over the Chancellor and his Associates," on the construction of the law in contempt to the construction of the law in the construction of this law had never question because the construction of this law had no ents and acts as " windictiveness," senten under repealed statutes, being uncertain and variable in the adjudication on the same laws; and one could hardly think differently in reading the sentence" this strange discovery reminds us of a case, etc.," and then proceed-

But we understand you to disclaim now in open Court, that there is any parallel in these cases; and if you shall state that in as public a manner as the article has been published, we should consider you as purged of the contempt.

ing to relate the anecdote about Judge Parsons.

we do not hold for a moment, that any action in this Court, or any decision of this Court, is not the subject of just criticism, for the proceedings are held in the presence of the people and for their benefit. Our decisions criticism, not only as to their law, but even their composition and mode of statement, but those who undertake to criticise should be sure of their ground and state accurately the facts; and writers in public newspapers may not attribute motives not apparent upon the face of the decisions, nor indulge in personal denuncia-tions, or invectives, nor mistate facts, or travesty our ecisions, and we think that any person who undertakes criticise should be quite sure of his competency so to a, not only by being sure of his facts, but of their relative bearing on the case. We state this as a general rule only, for you yourself, sir, have thoroughly disclaimed any intention so to do, and we can no longer charge you with such intention. But whilst proper criticism is the lawful right of every citizen, -nay, we may even go further and say, that where a citizen sees a flagrant wrong, it may become his duly so to criticise, yet, on the other hand, such omments as we have spoken of and condemned above, are equally liable to be punished as contempt of Court, whether he trial, to which they pertain, is still going on or has been We hold that any comments intended to forecast public opinion, or influence the judgment of the Court, whilst a case s on trial, is a contempt of Court; and such we understand to be the holding of other judges, and it is this, that is meant, when it is said, that a review of the case unfavorably or otherwise, after the hearing has closed, does not constitute a con-tempt. But, it has never been holden, that a ridiculous and unitue comparison, as well as an inacurate statement of facts, which was intended to east ridicule upon judicial proceedings, was not a contempt of the Court upon whom those reflections

In this case, we have said, that if the anecdote above alluded to, should be taken from the article, that there would be nothing left that could be fairly indeed a contempt; hand, that the presence of the so-called anecdote, which appears to be introduced as an illustration, makes the article appear to the view of the ordinary reader exceedngly objectionable, and to render its writer liable to enalty. Nor can a contempt be purged at all, by saying imply, that the writer does not consider that the published matter is such, nor ought one to be absolved from all penalty on his statement, that he did not intend any offense, and is quite sorry, that it should be so construed by any one. The Court must be the judge as to whether the words used, constitute a contempt: while personally the Court might be quite willing to accept such an ex-planation; it might feel called upon to punish such an offense for the protection of its dignity and honor as a In view of your explanation and disavowal of intentional disrespect, you may go hence on payment of the costs of this proceeding.

Late from the Volcano on Hawaii.

Increased Action of the Fires in old Kilauca-Effect of Rains on the Volcano-A Snow Storm in the Tropics-Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea covered with Snow.

To the Editor of Pacific Commercial Advertiser. Sir: I was much interested with your remarks in last week's paper on the influence of rain in prosubjects," it also in the same clause declares | ducing volcanic disturbance, as they coincide, in the that they shall be held responsible for the abuse | main, with the views which I have long held and expressed, and which my observations during the past few months confirm. Having lately visited the crater of Kilauea, on Hawaii, and found it in great activity, I will comply with your request and state what has occurred. The wet season in Kau commenced early in December, and with it greatly increased activity of the volcano. My house is some twenty miles south-west of the crater; but the latter is so located as to be in full view, and its smoke by day and the light by night are distinctly seen, affording opportunity to watch the daily changes that take place. On my way to Hilo, I reached the crater about dusk on the public, that the service had been made upon | 8th of January, after riding through the rain for five hours from Kapapala. Approaching it, I found an unusual amount of steam rising both from the extensive crater and the plateau which surrounds it. The Chief Justice said, that the Court was You may remember that the road from Kapapala clouds of sulphurous steam rose from the numerous You say in this article, that "the unexpected and cracks along the road, so dense as to make it almost impassable, and quite a task to urge my animal through it. I have never seen the like in my frequent visits there during the past thirty years, although there is always considerable steam to be seen along the road and in the crater itself, but on this

You can imagine in what state I found the volcano. My visit could not have been more opportune for observing the effect of rain on its fires, which were in a state of terrible commotion, the lava rising to the rim of the two lakes now in fusion, and causing frequent outbursts of lava streams, which flow into the central depressed basin of Kilauea. This sunken portion of the crater was formed by the sudden subsidence of the lava during the great eruption of 1868, when, to use an expressive term, " the bottom of the crater fell out," leaving a basin some four hundred feet lower than the surrounding lava ledge. Into this streams are now frequently pouring the lor and his Associates, or that the Judges of this lava which bursts out from Halemaumau, and which tends to fill the basin. Of course, this central part of the great crater was all aglow at night with hundreds of fires, lending additional charm and fascina-

flowed around the base of the hill which surrounds it. Another unusual sight that has lately been of frequent occurrence is the falling in of the precipitous walls of this hill, caused by their being undermined by the boiling lava at their base. In this way, secions of the walls, perhaps 200 feet high and weighing thousands of tons, tumble into the fiery lake with a most terrific crash and noise, there to be melted, boiled over, and thrown out in streams as before From the verandah of the hotel it looks as if it might be dangerous to venture among such a restless, uncontrollable, fiery element; but, accompanied by a careful guide, there is not the least langer. Indeed, one loses all fear when fairly launched on a voyage of discovery among the molten streams and fires of Kilaues, so novel and so fascinating is the sight. A more favorable time could nating is the sight. A more favorable time could not be selected to visit it than now, in this very J. NCTT & CO.,

It may not be generally known that the vicinity of the crater is more subject to rain than any part of Hawaii. This may be caused in part by the heat which constantly issues from it, affecting the atmosphere for miles around. I have often observed the cloud of smoke rising from the pit to a height of, say, 2,000 feet, taking a sweep to the eastward for ten miles or more, till it encounters the trade winds from the sea, then, curving upward, float twenty or thirty miles to westward, at least 10,000 feet above the crater. This smoke stream often takes the shape of a hand sickle, the handle resting on the crater, the blade first curving east, and its point stretching far off to westward. At other times it hangs over the crater like a spread umbrella. As this dark smoke leaves the crater, perhaps charged with electricity, it must have a great effect in producing rain n that immediate neighborhood.

Perhaps the finest sight observed in connection with the late stormy weather has been the snow on Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea. The first snow storm of this winter-and a really novel sight is a snow storm in the tropics-occurred on the 26th of December. It was accompanied with terrific peals of thunder and frequent lightning. On the lower lands we had rain, but the next morning revealed Mauna Loa's summit covered with snow down as far as the forests-not in little patches, but perfectly white, as seen. It is worth a twelvemonth's residence on Ha-If you must answer "no" to each one of waii to witness such a sight, for it is only once in these interogations, where is the parallel of your | many years that the entire summit is so completely covered, although nearly every winter some snow is seen on both mountains. Mauna Kea has also been well covered with snow the past month, but its summit being more serrated, the snow lies in drifts. Up to the date that I took the steamer at Kawaihae,

> I should like to write more of interest in this connection, but I have given enough to show that there is a striking sympathy between the volcano and the rains and stormy weather around it. Of one thing, however, we may feel perfectly safe, that there will be no eruption on Mauna Loa so long as the volcano of Kilauea remains open and intensely active as it now is, for it serves as a wonderful safety-valve, provided by an all-wise Creator, to allow the increased steam and gases to escape with damage to no one. But when Kilaues becomes closed, even for a short time, and these terribly powerful agents are shut up in the vast internal fire pits,-then look out for an explosion!

Very truly yours, H. M. WHITNEY. Jan. 31, 1879.

P. S -Allow me to suggest that if one or more instruments were provided to measure the direction and force of earthquakes, and also to measure the amount of electricity in the atmosphere, and sta-tioned at the best points near the volcano, valuable information might be gathered which would assist in determining the laws that govern volcanoes in connection with storms, of which little is yet known.
